THE THEATER.

Belasco Theater.

The supplementary season at the Belasco Theater opened auspiciously last night with Odette Tyler and her company in R. C. Carton's comedy, "Lady Huntworth's Experiment." This piece has not been seen here since its presentation several years age with Hilda Spong in the leading role, and the large audience at the Belasco last evening accorded liberal and enthusiastic applause to the initial performance of Miss Tyler and the players supporting her. Lady Huntworth's Experiment" is a thoroughly entertaining play. It abounds in sparking comedy and amusing situations, while its interest is enhanced by an agree-able strain of sentiment and occasional touches of pathos. The principal character in the piece, Caroline Rayward, the divorced wife of Lord Huntworth, assumes the position of cook in the vicarage of the Rev. Audley Pillenger, in order to escape from the notoriety caused by troubles with her dissolute husband. While presiding over the culinary destinles of the vicarage all the male members of the household, and some of the guests as well, fall in love with the attractive widow, and many interesting and humorous complications ensue.

The entire company proved its capabilities in excellent manner in this performance. Miss Tyler played the role of Caroline Rayward with a vivacity and charm that won for her unstinted approval. In the comedy scenes her work was bright and infectious, while in the more serious moments her appeal to the sympathies of the auditors was effective. In the part of Capt Dorvaston, whose affection for Lady Huntworth supplies the chief sentimental interest, Mr. Wilson Melrose was seen to advantage and won much applause. A advantage and won much applause. otable characterization was that given by Fuller Mellish, who essayed the role of Gandy, the butler. Others of the cast who contributed to the enjoyment of the piece by their creditable performances were Priestly Morrison as the vicar, Guy Coombs as Lord Huntworth, Blanche Stoddard as the scullery maid, and Inez Plummer as "The Embarrassment of Riches." A number of famous men were interested at one period of their career in the betterretent of the conditions which existed among the poor of the east side of the city of New York, There came to these earnest workers a moment when their sociological endeavors seemed fraught with fallure. But at that time a mysterious benefactor sent many thousands of dollars for the betterand underfed. It is treating with this theme in which love, sociology and politics so frequently mingle in the real life of ur times that Louis Kaufman Anspacher, known to the dramatic and literary world as the author of the poetic drama "Tristan and Isolde," and a professor at Columbia University, made his greatest literary reputation. Mr. Braden, in producing this play. has given the author a cast of exceptional excellence. The character of the young weman who suddenly inherits a great fortune and becomes interested in the regen-eration of the lower side of New York life is portrayed by Kathryn Kidder, who has been seen in this city frequently and who will be remembered as a member of the Louis James-Kathryn Kidder-Frederick Warde combination of players in classical roles. Mr. Bruce McRae, who will have the character of the east side settlement worker, is remembered in this city as 102, mer leading man for Julia Marlow. Oth-ers in the cast will include Scott Cooper, John W. Bunny, Dudley Hawley, Gertrude Berkeley, Eva Dennison, Charles J. Bell, Stanley Dark, Vellma Beryl, James Kear-ney, Henry Buckler, Bernard Mullin, Chas. Chappelle, Harold Cohill, Frank Wunderle, Edward Cookson and others.

"The Duke of Killicrankie."

For the second week of the spring and summer season at the Columbia the attraction to be presented by Guy Standing and the Columbia Theater Company will be Capt. Robert Marshall's comedy romance, "The Duke of Killierankie," which is similar to the old classical comedies. Something of the popularity of "The Duke of Killierankie" may be gathered from the fact that it has not only been played the longest engagement of any piece at the Empire Theater, in New York, but it had a long run in London, where it was first produced by Charles Frohman's English com-pany. "The Duke of Killicrankie" is a comedy romance in three acts, redolent with the atmosphere of London fashionable life and admirably hits off the foibles and weaknesses of England's most interesting set. It is unusually popular in its appeal; its characters illustrate English types whose absurditles strike the gallery as forcibly as the the box; its wit and humor, for an English piece, is wonderfully American, scarcely a speech being without a happy stroke of the genuine comedy, and its prin-cipal theme, that of the persistent love of the Duke of Killicrankie for Lady Henrietta Addison, is delightfully romantic. The plot centers around the young, eccentric duke, who, after three unsuccessful proposals, has decoyed the beautiful Lady Addison to his Scottish castle, entangling in the same trap Mrs. Mulholland, the "Glue King's" widow, as chaperon, and Mr. Pitt-Welby, M. P., as general assistant. The duke's strategy and the defeat of his plans by the lady's own cleverness are all charm-ingly suspended in solution until the last

"The Jilt."

"The Jilt," a society racing drama, will be the second play to be presented by the Odette Tyler Company at the Belasco Theater, commencing Monday evening, May 7 It has been some years since this comedy has been seen in Washington. When the playwright, Dion Boucleault, first offered it to the public "The Jilt" made a hit, but it is not often played at present because of the constant upheaval of new plays. Theatergoers, however, are demanding productions which combine some interest stronger than that of scenery and costumes, and this respect over the majority of plays which have lately made a bid for popularity. It has for its foundation a powerful love story in a modern setting, which is told in Boucleault's inimitable style, that employs both naturalness and brilliancy situations are dramatic. The letters of the flirtatious young married woman just home from her honeymoon form an interest-ing thread in the plot, and the big racing scene in the last act, where the dark horse wins, is thrilling. The comedy element is generously distributed. Miss Tyler will have the role of the sister-in-law of the "Jilt." Wilson Melrose, Fuller Mellish, Guy Coombs, Priestly Morrison, Robert S. Taber, Harold Saiter, Inez Plummer, Bjanche Stoddard, Mrs. West and Ann Butterfield will all have parts in the produc-

It is said that this offering compresses into its limits most of the vocal gems and certainly the greatest dancing interpolation in the Whitney opera. The aerial flight and dance of the witches was the principal novelty of the productions, and that has been lifted in its entirety into polite vaudeville. Miss Barsch enacts the dual role of the Mother Witch and the Maid of Nicobar, while Charles Deagons plays His Satanic Majesty. Other noveities will be Charles Leonard Fletcher in his protean presentation, "An Evening With Charles Dickens and Other Great Novelists;" Raymond and Caverly, the German "wizards of joy;" the original eight Bedouin Arabs; the Italian trio; Estelle Wordette and company in "When & Cat's Assay." REFERED TO COUNSEL.

Points Raised Regarding the Embalming of Bodies. After a conversation yesterday with John R. Wright, who is secretary of the Funeral Directors' Association, Commissioner Macfarland has requested the opinion of the corporation counsel upon questions relating to the present precedure in embalming bodies that are to be transported to other jurisdictions. Mr. Wright asked particularly concerning the power lying in the District health officer to prescribe conditions which must obtain before a permit is granted for removal of a body from the city, suggesting that there is now no ment of the conditions of the overworked act of Congress nor a regulation of the paring a body for shipment is defined. To a certain extent all undertakers are guided by the requirements of the railroads, which are quite strict, and by the requirements of the different states, and the Funeral Directors' Association contends that, without law or regulation to sustain him, the health officer has not the right to enforce requirements of his own making.

Another matter which Mr. Wright brought up for discussion concerned the licensing of funeral directors, the opinion being expressed that an undertaker should be licensed before he is permitted to em-

Both matters were reerred to the corporation counsel and beside giving an opin-inon on the legal points involved it is probable that he will be asked to pass upo form of drafts of amendments to the bills before Congress, which propose to regulate certain other details in the handling and treatment of dead bodies in the District of Columbia.

OPPOSE USURY BILL

Ex-Senator Thurston and Others

Heard by Commisioners. At a hearing before the Commissioners yesterday former Senator John M. Thurston, Robinson White and other speakers argued for an unfavorable report by the Commissioners upon Senate bill 4676, which proposes making the accepting of usury in the District of Columbia a criminal offense. Mr. Thurston explained that in his long career in the legislative business it had been demonstrated repeatedly to his satisfaction that it is best to let every man work out his own salvation. "I would regard it as a step backward if the specification in this bill making the taking of usury a criminal offense should be enacted into law," he said. "Some states believe the absence of any law on the subfect works best, but the requirement generally is that only the original debt must be ally is that only the original debt must be repaid. As a rule, the man who loans without security is relying solely upon the honor of the borrower to make the payments promised, and it is the additional risk of this sort of business that demands and receives more than the usual rates of interest."

Both Mr. Thurston and Mr. White con-

Both Mr. Thurston and Mr. White con-terded that the enactment of such a statute would drive out of business all the class would drive out of business an the class of money loan men who might be termed the reputable brokers and that there would succeed a more undestrable class, who would extort much heavier interest for the chance they must always take of being made criminally liable. It was also stated that the enactment of any such drastic bill the class of th would drive out of the city a great amount of outside capital. Mr. White spoke particularly against any enactment which would attach the stigma of usury to certain classes of negotiable paper.

About Prices.

A business man informed us recently that he admired our work, and that we showed good taste and judgment on all the printing he had seen of our production, but that he thought the grade was too good to use in his business.

He was fully convinced of the superiority of our work, but believed that our prices must necessarily be more than he could pay. We took that man in hand and showed him the folly of such an idea-we showed him that good work does not necessarily mean high prices. We were so successful in our talk to him that, if you are possessed of the same idea, we would like to talk to you about it. We believe our prices are very low for what we give in return. Let us know what day. what time and what place we can talk over this matter with you.
